How many kids do you have? Five! Ages 32 to 17.

What's the hardest thing about raising kids? My sleep was so constantly interrupted that at one point I thought I would just try to stay up for the rest of my life.

What's the best? To see that through all the fights, tears and trips to the ER, my kids have turned out to be the funniest, most compassionate and loving adults I know.

What made your most difficult kid your most difficult kid? My daughter's strong nature actually brought my husband and me to our knees. Today her strong nature allows her to endure situations most could never. I think to myself, so there was a purpose for all of that!

What was the craziest thing one of your kids ever did? Two of them jumped out of an airplane—and they dragged me with them.

What ways did you fill those summer days when the kids were home? They loved VBS. How much more they would have loved Camp Rock. It's the best week of this or any summer!

What would you tell a couple planning to raise a family? The most important thing you can teach, the coolest thing you can say, the most exciting thing you can show—is that Jesus loves them.
