MINISTRY HIGHLIGHT

ELEPHANT IN THE ROOM

How can a disease that touches more than four of every ten people can be something nobody talks about?

"Diabetes is shrouded in shame and denial," says Eric Swearingen, the Diabetes Ministry leader and a diabetic. "If diabetes is a killer, then shame is its accomplice."

Since diabetes is commonly thought of as a disease that is brought on by a person's lifestyle choices, a diabetic often feels the shame of having done it to themselves. The result is people don't talk about it and the less they talk about, the less diabetics and their loved-ones can benefit from the conversation. A loss of eyesight, limbs and early death are common outcomes.

The Rock's Diabetes Ministry pulls the cover from diabetes and bring people into an environment of information, accountability and absolutely no judgment. Adds Swearingen, "We support each other in creating lifestyles that aren't constantly threatened by diabetes—but it can only happen with the help of others."

The ministry reaches beyond the Rock and into the community where so many live in the dark about it. "For example," says Swearingen, "40% of all homeless are veterans and nearly all of them are diabetics. If that isn't worth talking and doing something about, I don't know what is."
