JANUARY 22-25 // 5:30PM-9:30PM

The truth is that losing a child hurts. Nobody would debate it. Most would agree it must hurt in order for us to be human. "Grieve," they would say, "you have to feel it."

For those who have experienced such a thing, even when the pain goes away, that alone brings more pain. As time goes on and the pain dissipates, it acts as a forgetting—and forgetting is the ultimate betrayal.

The truth is that losing a child hurts. But what if there was another truth. One that said, feel the pain, feel the purpose, feel the hope.

Is there any place for that kind of talk?

Just ask the Meadors.
