Q: What made you think that writing could impact people?

A: An organization in New York asked me to write an ad to convince young girls to keep their babies. I thought how amazing that while I write in San Diego, babies 3,000 miles away might be born.

Q: What's your favorite part about your job?

A: Getting to experience a person's transformation. I've found their story doesn't really exist until someone starts probing around. For them, as well as me, it's an adventure.

Q: Why is storytelling important?

A: Stories stay in people's souls in a different way than other messaging, with feelings and concepts that people can relate to. That "remembrance" is what I'm after. Plus, we have to keep telling our stories of Christ's love to each other.

Q: How are you gifted as a storyteller?

A: No matter how hard it is, I am not afraid to lead people to raw, dark and sensitive places. There are usually lots of tears—many of them mine.
