TAX SEASON SALE AT THE ROCKPILE!

Mike Clark loved his job. As a nurse, he would daily bring comfort to people who were in pain, scared or dying.

One-on-one time with the patients was particularly sweet, when the hard business of getting healthy was over and it was time to sit, talk and let patients know that they were cared for and seen as people, not just the sick. Hold a hand. Wet a brow.

Sure a lot of it was dirty, gut-wrenching work. But it was deeply rewarding, so much so that he happily worked six days a week. The hospital staff marveled at his eagerness to take on all the extra shifts he could.

But that's the kind of thing you do when your job feeds your need to bless others— and an unfathomable addiction to painkillers.
