When Shannon heard that a sister of her son's friend was cutting herself, Shannon's heart was touched and deeply moved. She, too, had gone through a low point in her life and knew what kind of pain the girl must be going through that made her resort to self-harm. Shannon desperately wanted to talk to the young girl, but didn't know the family very well. After inviting the family to church one Sunday, Shannon and her husband began to develop a relationship with the girl's father. He had been away from church for some time following his divorce and was grateful for the encouragement to return.

Shannon spoke with the girl's father, telling him she knew about the cutting and understood the pain his daughter was going through. He agreed to let Shannon speak with his daughter, praying that she could bring a message of hope to the hurting teen.
