ourteen-year-old Steve Saylor and his older brother, Tim, were walking home after school when they saw someone sitting on their porch. It was 12-year-old Amy Hightower waiting for a piano lesson from their mother.

"My mom's not home yet?" Steve called out to Amy.

Amy shook her head. He looked at his watch. Mom was a half hour late.

"Hmm. Well, come on in." They opened the door and all went inside. Through the windows they could see their 12-year-old brother playing in the back yard. There was a note on the table in his mother's writing, saying that their baby sister Laura, who was five, was at a family friend's house across town.

That's weird, Steve thought.

"Mom!" Tim called upstairs. There was no answer. They stood in the silence and looked at each other again, the strange events of the past months and years began to nibble at the edges of their minds.
