ROCK THRIFT

It was the answer I least wanted to hear. Yet my mom thought it was just the thing to say to her daddy-starved little girl. It happened when I would notice that my dad was strangely absent from the house. I would ask her, "Where's daddy?"

That's when she would say it. "Daddy's gone on a trip," she would offer with an odd smile. "And he'll be back real soon."

He'll be back real soon. All that meant to me was that I should get used to being without him for a very long time.

When I was 13, my dad, who lived in Carson City, which is just a half-hour drive to Lake Tahoe where my mom and I lived, was going to be at the house for Christmas. I couldn't remember a Christmas when dad was home and this was going to be my best Christmas ever. Sure enough dad came through the door...but there was something wrong.
