Markie was at a small gathering at a friend's apartment when she heard another guest say something that caught her attention.

"Being from South America, I didn't know English, so I decided that I would write down parts of the Bible word for word in English to learn the language," she said.

Hmm, thought Markie. Using the Bible as a way of learning a language. She was intrigued. Soon after, she decided to give it a shot herself—reading the Bible and writing each word by hand. She reads a word at a time, never reading ahead, and then writes each word feeling the pen gliding slowly on the page, feeling each turn, tip and loop. The words of God, she thought to herself.

It had the desired effect that she had hoped for. As an easily distracted person, she found that she had finally gained the focus she had always hoped for. Her interest in writing, or absorbing each word, was starting to become one of her favorite things to do in her day. The problem was, when she started too late in the morning, her time spent writing competed with the issues of the day—kids leaving for school, phone calls, things that needed to be done around the house.
